JUST ONE GIRL FOR SOUTH CAROLINIANS

(By Associated Press.)
NEW YORK, April 24.—Senator Benjamin Tillman of South Carolina talked not only of the solid South and white supremacy at the annual dinner of the South Carolina society last night, but he touched incidentally on the divorce question.
"I have traveled all around this country," said the senator, "and there is one thing about a South Carolinian that distinguishes him from every one else in this country. And that is this—that he has 'just one girl,' and when she grows old he doesn't look around for some young pullet and then go to some judge—none of those in this audience, of course—and for some trivial cause, frequently trumped up, try to get rid of the girl who has been with him all his life."

Several American War Correspondents Are Wounded During the Fighting ---One Has Narrow Escape.

(By Associated Press.)
CONSTANTINOPLE, April 24.—The constitutionalists are in complete control at the capitol tonight, with the sultan practically a prisoner in Yildiz palace. With his troops he is at the mercy of the army of occupation. Mahmoud Scheffket Pasha, the commander of the invading army desires to finish his work without further bloodshed. In the negotiation with the sultan's representatives he has extended the period of grace within which the sultan must make his final decision.
Yildiz Kiosk may be rushed during the night as some 5000 infantry troops are within a mile and a half of the palace. What disposition will be made with the sultan when he is in the hands of the constitutionalists is problematical, but the belief from authoritative sources is that he will continue as a nominal constitutional monarch, and will be largely responsible to the cabinet, and it in turn responsible to parliament. Complete tranquility prevails in the city, but the serious feature of the situation is the refusal of the Yildiz garrison to surrender.
The garrison surrounding the sultan at Yildiz possesses artillery and it is believed the neighborhood is mined and a strong defense could be made. General Scheffket is giving the sultan's advisors time to consider before rushing the palace. Artillery is being placed and troops are massed and will attack the Yildiz if the sultan persists in refusing to surrender. Fighting began this morning and ended at noon. The dead will reach several thousand. In the pockets of some of the dead there was found large sums of gold which is assumed to be the price of their loyalty. Ambassador Leishman declared the conduct of the Americans during the fighting, while he was arranging to send them to a steamer, was splendid. Frederick Moore, an American newspaper correspondent, was shot during the fighting, but is not dangerously wounded. An English correspondent named Booth was also wounded.
The modern political ideas are supported by an army of 50,000 that are opposed to the sultan, but the Asiatic provinces are backward, and are confirmed in the Moslem faith and are yet to be reckoned with. Even European Turkey has only a thin veneer of education and culture, and it is believed the old order will likely have another chance before many months. For the present the constitutionalists have won a clear victory. Everything is being carried out with such order that the city of a million was kept in order while severe engagements were being fought in certain sections. The non-combatants were secure from molestation. Several Americans were wounded during the fighting, including Frederick Moore and Harry G. Dwight, both correspondents, and Alexander A. Gargoulo, the first dragoman of the American embassy. The bullet that passed through Moore's neck killed a native standing behind him. Dwight was under fire for some time and was shot while attempting to reach the city from an outlying village. Passing the Yildiz palace in a rowboat the water about him was constantly splashed with spent bullets. Gargoulo's injury is not severe.
The conflict between Moslem and Moslem had a profound effect upon the Turkish people and it is feared will be the seed for further trouble. In revenge for the butcheries inflicted upon them during the recent outbreak the officers of the garrison troops refused to help the soldiers in the fight, even hiding the keys to the ammunition and gun rooms.

HOAGE DISTRICT COMING AHEAD

(Special to the Bonanza.)
ALTURAS, April 24.—Mr. Garfield Force of Goldfield and associates have opened up a 2-foot vein on their lease on the Pyramid claim and at a depth of 25 feet are piling ore on the dump that carries values from $26 to $40 with occasional assays as high as $227, about 90 per cent of the values in gold, they are confident they are nearing the chute from which the float has been found near their shaft that assayed better than $500 per ton; samples across the balance of their shaft show better than $10 per ton.
Schauer, Bassler, C. Laughlin, the successful lessees of the Hoage district, have been doing a very large amount of development work on the Sunshine ground and have a drift on the vein 190 feet, and have about 90 feet of shaft back over their drift. A raise is now going up and will connect with the shaft from the surface. As soon as this is completed, stopping will be resumed and they expect to produce a heavy tonnage. Four shipments have been made from this property that have averaged over $100 per ton at the Grigaby mill.
A cross vein has been cut near the breast of the drift and this vein carries about three feet of quartz that averages near the $30 mark and as soon as the stope is started, drifting will be started both ways on this cross vein, this is a blind vein as no evidence of it appears on the surface.
